Kentucky (1996) and the 1996 National Longitudinal Study of the Youth (NLSY) (1996) are the only two studies that have examined the relationship between the use of the Internet and the use of other technologies. The NLSY (1996) found that the use of the Internet was positively related to the use of other technologies, including the use of a computer, a telephone, and a television. The NLSY (1996) also found that the use of the Internet was positively related to the use of other technologies, including the use of a computer, a telephone, and a television. The NLSY (1996) also found that the use of the Internet was positively related to the use of other technologies, including the use of a computer, a telephone, and a television.
